THE INFORMATION herein contained has been compiled from unpublished family records. We are very grateful to the many cousins who have assisted so graciously with data concerning their own branches. Especially helpful have been Hale, Leroy E. Lyle, and Ross Corlett, Mrs. Arthur K. Jones, Mrs. John L. Moody, and Mrs. Thomas Moss.

Miss Anna Hamilton designed and drew The Corlett Family Tree and the map of the Isle of Man. To her we express our sincere thanks and appreciation for her beautiful and accurate work.

We have doubtless omitted many important and interesting events in the lives of the men and women who compose the Corlett family. For this we are sorry. We could record only the information we could come upon.

CHAPTER I

The Isle of Man and Its People

THE ISLE OF MAN gave birth to the Corlett family and stamped each member of it, no matter where he went or where he lived, with the characteristics of the Manxmen.

Man, or Mon as it was called in the olden days, is a snug little island resting in the Irish Sea midway between England, Wales, Ireland, and Scotland. It is about thirty-three miles long from north to south, and twelve miles across in the widest places. The coastline is rugged, cut with chasms and caves, especially in the South; the terrain is rough and hilly; but both are very, very beautiful. A little north of the center of the island there rises over two thousand feet the highest hill, Snaefell, round and smooth, clothed in purple haze from the uplands to the sea which hides its feet. Of course, the rivers are small. Into Douglas Haven, or Habour, empties Avin-Glass (river bright) and Avin-Dhoo (river Dark). These as well as the Sulby in the north and even the Neb, whose waters flow from the lead fields to Peel Haven, are all picturesque. The two largest valleys are the Ballough and Andreas. There are also fields of shingly ground covered with sand beyond Bride Hill down to the sea. Nowhere in the British Isles is the scenery so beautiful as it is in Man.

The Manxman has inherited the characteristics of the two races that welded themselves together centuries ago upon the Isle of Man. From the Celt he has received a feeling of superstition and mysticism which in later days has developed into religious devotion. One of their number has written:

When the Manx language is dead there will remain, however, just one badge of our race—our superstition. I am proud to tell you that we are the most superstitious people now left among the civilized nations of the world—Manxmen have not yet taken the poetry out of the moon and the stars and the mist of the mountains and the wail of the Sea¹.

They are all singers, but Manx music is like the wail of the wind in a lonely place near the sea, sometimes like the soughing of the long grass, sometimes like the rain whipping the panes of a window with rods. Nearly always long-drawn like a moan, rarely various, never martial, never inspiriting, often sad and plaintive, full of the brine, the salt foam, and the sad story of the sea.²

Together with these qualities are joined imagination, initiative and inventiveness, bravery and daring which give him an eagerness and capacity to weigh questions and to participate in public affairs, while in private life he has an equally practical consideration of life, tinged with satire, but with no cynicism. The final bequest of his Celtic forbears is a white-hot temper.

The Norsemen came to Man from Iceland and Norway

the latter part of the eighth century, A.D. They have given the Manx a sturdy physique, breadth of chest, and increased height, as well as a dainty beauty, rosy cheeks, and clear white skin as sensitive as the Celtic temper. They have also given the islanders a gentleness of manner, an inclination to sloth—their motto is, "Time Enough"—strength of character, refinement, intelligence, and above all independence, hatred of rank, and modesty even to shyness. The Manxman is so fearful of owing anyone anything, that he sometimes holds himself coldly aloof and even refuses to accept the gifts of loved ones. Add to this a great pride and feeling of equality which dates back to the open Parliament of Tynwold¹ where every man had a right to stand before his chief and king and express his opinion, and where in the last analysis his vote decided issues.

The Celt and the Norsemen wedded to produce the Manx, but the Isle nurtured him and modified his character. From her narrow valleys and from the sea he gathered his food and other necessities of life by hard labor. Therefore, he became an orderly man, patient, persevering, not overly optimistic not yet too pessimistic, but just middling. He hoped for and was eager to secure stores of riches and was capable of caring for them when acquired. Well he knew that life depended upon his ability to provide for the future.

1. The Norse divided the land into sheadings or ship districts, each with its own authority. Thing was a court or assembly in which all freemen participated equally. The Al-Thing met twice a year at St. Johns. It consisted of the Legislative Council and the House of Keys sitting together in Tynwold to consider the general good. In the wold, or forest, men built a hill or mound twelve feet high and eighteen feet across at the base. For it sods were brought from each sheading. This was called Tynwold Hill. After the Al-Thing adjourned, the King with great ceremony ascended the Hill, faced the Sun, and proclaimed law and judgement to the freemen standing about. Their vote upon each measure was an important part of the proceedings.

Common work close to nature intensified the wonderful pride of the Manxman. He knew himself the equal of any man, yet he was never a snob. He could wear the coarsest old clothes at work, but would hide in shame rather than not be as well dressed as the next one on a Sunday. He had quick sympathy for others in trouble and gave of his strength or his substance unhesitatingly. He was a marvelous host and would give his last morsel to entertain his guest in fitting manner. Even when taken in by another, he seldom complained, but no one could cheat him twice in the same way.

The Manxman loved the companionship of his fellows. He could sing, dance, or tell a tall tale with equal grace. He was much beloved—this religious man with the round ringing oath and the generous hand.

Adventurous too he was, as all seamen must be, yet very practical. He read fact rather than fiction, in books and most of all in nature. Perhaps, the Manxmen of today is the simplest and least spoiled child of nature in the civilized world, and this in spite of the fact that geographically he is close to complicated modern life.

In the fertile valley of Kirk Andreas lived a typical Manx family, the Corlett. The members of it displayed the familiar characteristics of the Manxmen. Most of them were farmers, but some entered the church, the school, or engaged in other occupations of the Isle. Our story begins with Daniel Corlett of Donaughney, who married Elenore Cannell, daughter of

KIRK ANDREAS

The Corlett Family in America

Daniel Cannell of Glunthrunk, Kirk Michael near Bishope Court, and settled in the parish of Kirk Andreas, Lezayre, in the northern part of Man. Here the land was flat, devoid of hills and productive of rich crops. Two children were born to them, Ann and John.

In 1930 Leroy E. Corlett and his wife of Oskaloosa, Iowa, visited the land of his fathers. From the account of his journey we read on pages 15-16:

Andreas church is about the largest in the Island and has for its Rector the Arch Deacon of the Island. There were about eighty persons present for the morning service. This church is not so very old, having been erected in 1872, and the tower a little later. There are parts of the church, however, that are over a thousand years old, and some of the slabs used in the gable in the north are very, very old and bear inscriptions of the Norse period. After the service ended the people quietly went out without taking any particular notice of us, as strangers. We went with the Sexton into the cemetery adjoining the church and found many aged marker tombstones bearing the name Corlett. The Rector came to us in the yard after the service. We introduced ourselves and told him why we were there. He invited us to go with him to the Rectory, a short distance from the church. He then said, "When did you say your father was born?" He was told July 4, 1828. He stepped to a bookcase and took down an old record, opened it, and after turning two pages, said, "Well, here is the record of the baptism of your father." He wrote it down as follows:

*Andreas Baptisms

John Edward, son of John Corlett and Ann Cottier, baptized 6th July.

The above is a true copy of an entry in Register

John Edward Corlett spent the first seven years of his life in the important port city of Douglas, Isle of Man. Then with his parents and sister Margaret, he voyaged to America to find a new home in Dutchess County, New York. The boy was eager to learn and quick to absorb knowledge of everything he contacted in person or through the printed page. At one time he worked in a sawmill. One day a log rolled out of control, struck him and permanently injured his right eye.

May 31, 1851 he married Catherine Amanda Crawford¹ and established a home in Sullivan County, New York. Here, their two oldest children were born. January 22, 1856 at Monticello, Sullivan County, New York, John Edward Corlett became a naturalized citizen of the United States of America. That event marked an important milestone in his life. Almost immediately this energetic and adventurous father lead his little family across the Mississippi to the frontier of Clayton County, Iowa. He secured land in Farmersburg Township and went to work to develop it. Here he and his wife reared a family of twelve children; nine sons and three daughters, and played an important part in the development of eastern Iowa.

John E. Corlett became a leading horticulturist who was especially interested in apples, plums, and grapes, which always took prizes at Iowa fairs. His grapes won high honors at the Chicago Fair of 1894. He was an ardent worker in the Clayton County Agricultural Association, especially in the organization and direction of the Annual Fair at National, Iowa.

This tireless and progressive farmer was also one of the best informed men in the field of national, state, and local politics. When he had, after careful consideration, reached a conclusion upon an issue, nothing could stop him from doing what he thought was right in the matter. Many and heated were the political debates of which he was a party. During the war of the States, he enlisted twice but each time was rejected because of faulty vision. Nevertheless he was an excellent marksman and even when an old man well past his three score years and ten, brought down a bird that was flying so high that younger eyes and hands would not attempt the shot. Denied an army career, he became United States Marshall and Captain of a company of the Home Guard. One of his duties as Marshall was to take the Federal Census¹ (1860-1870). He recorded facts so accurately and clearly that his work is a credit to him and to his office. After the war he was Department Treasurer.

1. The Iowa Census Records are now in the Archives of the United States, and Washington, D. C., U.S.A.

In another field of activity, John Edward was one of the organizers of the Clayton County Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and was secretary of it for many years. Likewise, he was instrumental in organizing the Iowa Mutual Tornado Insurance Company. As a friend of Colonel Richardson, founder of the North Iowa Times, he helped to equip the first newspaper office in Iowa in 1856.

John Edward was small of stature, quick of thought, alert, and energetic. He read widely, traveled all over the United States and adjoining countries, was interested in many things, and a keen observer of men and events. He was generous to a fault and gave unsparingly of time and substance to help a good cause or a person in need. Two of his favorite expressions were, "Why, God bless me," and "Don't say too tarnel much." As father of a large family, as an authority in the field of horticulture, as an organizer of business, as a patriot and active public servant, the little Manx boy became a citizen of the United States and a man of great influence in a pioneer land, and a much beloved friend of many.

After Mrs. Corlett's death August 19, 1906, he closed his home in Elkader, Iowa, whither he had retired some years earlier, and made his home with his children. Since they were widely scattered, it afforded him an opportunity to satisfy his life-long pleasure to travel.

October 6, 1912 he died at the home of his daughter

Jeannette at Rolfe, Iowa, and was buried beside his wife and three sons in the Girard Cemetery, Clayton County, Iowa.

IV C 3 1 HORACE BENJAMIN CORLETT, son of John Edward and Catherine Amanda.

When Horace was a boy of three winters, he came with his parents to Clayton County, Ia. Here he grew to manhood, attended the district school and learned much from his parents. Tall, slender, athletic, quick-tempered, he was mentally and physically strong and prided himself upon clean thinking and clean living.

On September 27, 1877, he married a pretty dark-eyed school teacher, L. Belle Hall, in Clayton County, Iowa. Their first home was his grandfather's place, the James of Crawford Farm. Then they moved to Monona where Horace had a machinery business. In 1880 he sold out and the young couple moved on to Ossian,

1. The story is told that, as a little girl she was given a silk dress, whereupon she went about smoothing it down and saying, "Lady, lady, lady."—Thereafter her brothers called her Lady which, as she grew up, was shortened to Lade. Belle was forgotten. Everyone knew her as Lade Hall.

Iowa. At least three important things happened during the ten-year sojourn here. First Mrs. Corlett wanted to make their name French and therefore, changed the spelling to Corlette. For this reason this branch of the family still uses the extra e. Second, all their children were born here. Finally, Horace began his public career as Mayor of the town.

In 1900 Horace moved the family to Ames, Iowa, to secure better educational opportunities for the children. He continued the trade he had followed in Ossian, namely that of contractor and builder. His fine workmanship may still be found in the public and private buildings erected during his long residence in the city. He was councilman at large and Mayor of Ames. One of the important public services he rendered the city was the promotion of the building of the Municipal Electric Light Plant.

He was a Mason; a member of the Blue Lodge at Ames, of the Shrine at Des Moines, Iowa, as well as of the Concistory and the Commandery. His chief recreations were fishing and hunting. After retiring from active work, he made his home with his son Lyle and with his daughter Bernice. At the latter's home at Clarion, Iowa, he died August 10, 1932.

1880-1889 The Halletts lived in Wyoming, Iowa, where he owned a drug store. For four years he was also city treasurer. Upon the death of his father, he and his little family returned to Mt. Carroll, but in 1891 moved to Sterling, Illinois. Here he was employed as a pharmacist until in 1897 he and his son Earle opened a drug store. In 1920 he retired from business. Thereafter he and his wife made their home with their daughter Marion in Washington, D. C. Throughout his life Mr. Hallett was a devoted member of the Presbyterian Church. As a director in the Y.M.C.A., a member of I.O.O.F., father of a family, and elder of the church, he lived the Christian principles as few are able to do.

As the wife of William Hallett, Ella had three interests; her children, her art, and her church. She produced many landscapes, pictures of flowers and of still life in crayon, water colors or oils. Although she was one of the first members of the Sterling Woman's Club, her civic life centered about her church. She was the doer of the thousand and one duties which fall to the lot of a religious woman. Her life was spent chiefly in doing little things to smooth the path of others.

In her eighty-eighth year she suffered a stroke of paralysis and died within a few hours. She and her husband are both interred at Sterling, Ill.

Marion Corlett Hallett's public service began when she was twelve years old. That summer she organized a kindergarten which she continued three seasons, first at her home and finally at Camp Meetings. In 1901 she graduated from Sterling Township High School and in 1902 from Frances Shimer Academy at Mt. Carroll, Ill. (now called Frances Shimer College) with a major in languages. She was, however, greatly attracted to the new field of domestic science. Through a competitive examination she won an all-expense scholarship offered by The National Magazine to Oread Institute of Domestic Science¹, Worcester, Mass. She graduated in 1903. That summer, while visiting relatives in New York, Marion responded to a request to open classes in Domestic Art, as sewing was then called. Mrs. John Jacob Astor sponsored one at Rhinecliff, N. Y.; and Mrs. Margaret Chanler Aldrich, at Barrytown, N. Y. The latter also took private lessons at her home on the Hudson. 1903-4, Marion held a position with the National Foods Company in Chicago, Ill. 1904-7, she was Manager of Yeatman High School Cafeteria, St. Louis, Mo.; 1907-9, she was Manager of Lincoln High School Cafeteria and 1909-10 of Queen Anne High School Cafeteria, Seattle, Washington. In the spring of 1910, Marion traveled with a party which included her cousin, Ruth Corlett, through Japan. On this trip she met the handsome attorney from Manilla, Arthur Kemp Jones. 1912-13 she was manager of Polytechnic High School Cafeteria,

The Corlett Family in America

Los Angeles, Calif. Marion's greatest contribution to her profession up to this time was the organization of school lunch rooms, where good wholesome food could be procured for five cents a dish.

February 15, 1913, Marion and her mother sailed from San Francisco for Japan where they met Arthur Jones. The young couple were married March 6, 1913 at the Presbyterian Manse in Yokahama. For two happy romantic years they lived in Manilla, Philippine Islands, before returning to the States in May, 1915.

After a sojourn in Chicago, Arthur and Marion went to Washington, D. C., 1917. World War I was in progress. Mr. Herbert Hoover, United States Food Administrator, asked Marion to be manager of the United States Food Administration Cafeteria and help to devise ways of economizing in foods, finding substitutes for some of the usual foodstuffs without decreasing the nutritive value of the diet. She accepted the challenge. From a very modest beginning in a corner of the building, she overcame the obstacles of wartimes and served as many as twenty-five hundred persons a day with good food, so purchased and conserved as to set an example for cooks and housewives throughout the nation. The Cafeteria made money too—one of the few government enterprises that did. However, prices were low; roast beef and gravy cost fifteen cents. After the war when the Food Administration demobi-lized, it became the War Department Cafeteria under the Welfare Service of the War Department.

In 1927, after ten years of service, Marion resigned. Many sought her services. Finally in 1929 she became Director of Food Service at the Dodge Hotel, which position she held till 1933. In that year she became Manager of the United States Department of Agriculture Cafeteria operated by the United States Department of Agriculture Welfare Association. Besides supervising the dietetic needs of the patrons, she also interested herself in the recreational needs of the members of her staff. Before World War II she gave to members of the department, classes in foodstuffs, their preparation and serving. She built up the cafeteria from a patronage of six hundred a day to over twelve thousand. Marion retired in May, 1949. Thus ended a long and brilliant career as Executive in the Institutional Field of Home Economics.

At the same time that this tall, dark-eyed, stately woman was an outstanding figure in her profession, Marion graciously maintained a happy home for her husband, her father and mother, her widowed brother and his children, and for an army of friends and relatives who came to her door. She was a member of the District of Columbia Home Economics Association, and for many years chairman of the Food Service Committee of the Washington Y.W.C.A. and a member of the Board of Directors. She was an active member of the Washington Chapter of the Business and Pro-especially natural history, agriculture and literature. As a young man he taught the district school, but his greatest work in education was done in later years in training his own children in a knowledge of nature. Once he went west to Nebraska and to Wyoming to find a location and his fortune, but soon returned to his native state and county. December 17, 1883, he married dark-eyed, sweet-tempered Mary L. Hall and established their home at McGregor, Iowa. Here were born to them a daughter, Mattie Mancile, who died in infancy, and two sons, Alfred Hale and Cyrus Raymond. Frank was engaged in the stock and grain business. It prospered, but his wife faded and died of tuberculosis. The following year he married Lillian Birdsay, a trained nurse, and skilled seamstress of McGregor. When his father retired to live in Elkader, Iowa, Frank moved onto the home place. Here he lived for many years. Besides being a successful farmer, raising prize fruits and stock, he also was a writer and poet. For twenty-five years he was the Farmersburg correspondent and columnist for The North Iowa Times. His writings were witty and sage.

December 14, 1913, a lamp exploded in the hands of his wife. Frank and his son Donald fought the fire valiantly, but the house was damaged, the men burned severely, and the wife and mother dead. Shortly thereafter his son Hale moved onto the old Corlett farm and Frank bought another place a bit farther South in the county. He reared his seven young children, farmed, wrote, carried on an insurance business, and as always, was interested in civic affairs.

Slender, deliberate of movement, Frank was the dandy of the family. He made a success of everything he undertook. He traveled far in Clayton County.

John Leslie Moody was born in Wisconsin and spent his youth in Rockford, Ill. By the time he had finished high school, World War I was in progress. Failing because of his age to enter the Navy as he desired, he became an apprentice machinist in a war plant, and later worked in the engineering department. Here he helped in designing a tool to shape wooden airplane propellers for the Air Forces. On his eighteenth birthday he received his Draft registration card, but the conflict ended before he could be called into active service.

In 1919 John Leslie entered Cornell College. He was a member of the Men's Glee Club, and its business manager one year; and played on the tennis and basketball teams. At the same time he did extension work in Mechanical and Electrical Engineering. Then he sought practical experience in tool making and machine design. July 30, 1927 he married Helen Vera Corlett in the Cornell College Chapel.

1929 he joined the engineering staff of Marchant. He worked under the direction of David Sunstrand, noted inventor of the adding machine, and later in the patent department. He became a professional engineer in Mechanics. 1934, John Leslie entered the employ of the Friden Calculating Machine Co., Inc.,

at San Leandro, California, in the research department. His first major design assignment and one of which he was most proud, was the ten-key model S Multiplier unit. He also designed the Friden electric motor. So many are the other instruments to whose manufacture he contributed that we cannot name them all here.

John L. Moody was a member of the Scottish Rite Masonry and the Shriners, as well as of the Society of Professional Engineers of California and of the National Society of Professional Engineers. He was interested in color photography as a hobby, played a good game of golf and enjoyed bowling. In fact he had quite a collection of medals and trophies won in tournaments. Quiet, gentle, efficient, he was admired, respected and loved by his associates.

Helen Vera kept house for her father and younger brothers and sister after her mother's death. She graduated from the Farmersburg High School. In 1925 she received an A.B. degree from Cornell College. 1925-27 she taught home economics in Toledo, Iowa. 1927-29 after her marriage in midsummer of 1927, she taught at Winnebago, Ill. Then she and her husband moved to Oakland, Calif.; their son was born; and Helen devoted all her time to making a beautiful home for her family. IV C 34 JAMES EMORY CORLETT, son of John Edward and Catherine Amanda.

Born March 14, 1858, Clayton County, Iowa.

Died June 29, 1928, Seattle, Washington.

Married February 23, 1886, Estella V. Garber (1861-1923), daughter of Martin A. Garber of Elkport, Iowa.

Children: Ruth Catherine, born November 12, 1888.

James Emory was born and reared on the Corlett homestead where, like his brothers he shared in the work of a pioneer's farm. Even when seven years old he drove an ox team like a man. He attended the district school, but money for a higher education was hard to find. Therefore, James set about earning his own way. Three times his health broke under the strain, but his will power was too strong to let his body give up, although he was never robust thereafter. He attended school at Fayette and at the University of Iowa. In 1877 he began to read law in the office of Samuel Murdock and John Larkin at Elkader and of Judge Garber of Garber, Iowa. At the same time he taught school.

In 1882 he was admitted to the bar on motion, and became a member of the law firm Barber and Corlett. In 1884 he was elected Clerk of the District Court of Clayton County, Iowa, at Elkader, which office he held for six years, (1885-1890). In 1886 he married the daughter of his former law partner, Estella V.

Garber. When his office of Clerk of Courts expired, he opened a law office in Elkader in 1891. Here, Jim built up a very large law practice. Because of his fearless adherence to truth and justice mixed with a gentleness of manner and understanding, he enjoyed the confidence of a very large circle of friends and clients. Moreover he exerted a powerful influence in the political as well as the legal circles of his county and state. He was known as a "square shooter" always.

Very early in his law practice in Elkader the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul Railroad Company retained him to guard their legal interests locally. In 1908 at their request, James moved his family to Seattle, Washington, whither the Railroad Company was extending its lines. Here he also became interested in mining, lumbering, and the maintenance of a loan company. For a time he also owned a small railroad operating out of Chehallis, Washington.

A most severe blow struck him in the death of his wife, Estella, in 1923. She was a woman of keen understanding and sympathy, a good wife and mother and a most gracious hostess.

Jim¹ and Stell were very much beloved. After her passing, James made his home with his daughter, but the zest of living was gone. Three years later he retired from business and law due to failing health. He passed away the afternoon of June 29, 1928. He and his wife are buried in Washelli Cemetery, Seattle, Washington.

1. Because of his professional bearing, his friends called him, "Judge".

Children:

1. Willard Irving, born August 17, 1887.
2. Florence Jeannette, born June 29, 1889.
3. Ross Harold, born March 17, 1891.
4. Mattie Ruth, born September 13, 1899.

Willard Best was born and reared on the Corlett Farm in Farmersburg Township, Clayton County, Iowa. He was educated in the Farmersburg schools. He also received expert training in farming from his father. In 1883 he bought a farm near his father's. The same year he became the youngest Master Mason in Iowa. In 1885 he married dark-eyed, black-haired Idella Carty of National, Iowa. He once revealed that on their nuptial morning he told her, "Those are my pants on the chair. Put them on now if you want to wear them."

"Thanks," said she, "I'll wear my own."

They lived together very happily for over fifty-three years. Three children were born to them on their Clayton County farm and one in Texas.

The tall tales of Texas appealed to Will. In 1893 he made his first trip to Henrietta to look around. The land looked good, but farming methods were poor. The next year, 1894, he sold his Iowa farm and moved his family south in January, 1895, to take advantage of the opportunities of the Lone Star State. He bought 355 acres located seven miles northwest of Henrietta for which he paid eight dollars an acre. Then began an agricultural revolution in Clay County. Will bought disc plows, harrows, some big mules, etc. He dug two wells to enable him to cool milk. His father sent him plum, apricot, and peach trees which he developed into a fine orchard. Sorghum and milo maize were also innovations. He prospered. Those who had scoffed became his disciples and adopted his methods.

In 1903 he was elected Commissioner of Clay County. 1905, he moved into Henrietta and opened a real estate office. In 1907 he was employed by the Texas Oil Company as head of its land department. After the first oil well came in at Petrola, he leased land rapidly, in fact ten times as much as anyone else. It paid. His leases later developed into important oil fields such as Electra, Burk Burnett, Eastland, Ranger, etc. In 1912 he moved to Wichita Falls to continue scouting and leasing. His name became associated with all the early developments thereabouts. He retired in 1920. When his wife died in 1938 he closed his home and went to live with his daughter, Mattie Ruth.

The Wichita Daily Times, March 5, 1950, hailed W. B. Corlett as "a human Dynamo at 88". He was a 32 degree Mason and Shriner, in fact the oldest Mason in age and duration of membership in Wichita Falls. He was a member of the Grace Methodist Church, a fine Bible student, a leader in civic affairs, who lived straight in all his ways—a prince among men. He died September 23, 1952.

1. Elsie Catherine, born July 2, 1888.
2. Carroll Corlett, born April 4, 1891.
3. Roy Norman, born November 18, 1893.

Amy Helen, whom her father often called Mona, one of the most beloved names of the Manxmen, was born on the Corlett homestead in Farmersburg Township, Clayton County, Iowa. She attended the district school and the Wyoming High School. February 4, 1885, she married Henry C. Hamilton of National, Iowa.

Henry had been born and reared within a few miles of the Corlett home and, therefore, had known his bride all her life. He had worked on his father's farm and had taught the district school to secure money to buy a relinquishment on a quarter section of land three miles north of Rock Valley in Sioux County, Iowa. In three years he had succeeded in erecting a small house and a cluster of farm buildings, and in getting a goodly number of acres under cultivation. Hither he took Amy. Together they shared the rigors of pioneer life: the blizzards of winter, the hot winds of summer, cyclones, grasshoppers, and the fear of prairie fires.

John Corlett, Amy's father, sent the young couple considerable nursery stock from his own farm. Maples and evergreen formed a windbreak on the west and north and east of the house. Larches lined the driveway from the road to the house, while orchards of apples and plums to say nothing of berries, currants, gooseberries, and raspberries, grew in the shelter of the windbreak. This was the first place in Sioux County to have such plantings. Many a covered wagon on its way to the Dakotas, camped in its shelter. Today the trees are magnificent, and the farm is one of the show places of the town. Here, three children were born to Henry and Amy.

In 1899 when the youngest one was old enough to go to school, they rented the farm and moved to Nora Springs, Iowa, where schools were available. Henry bought and operated a grain and seed elevator. He became president of the First National Bank also. He took part in social and civic affairs. He was a trustee of the Congregational Church, a Master Mason, Councilman, and President of the School Board.

Amy Helen was equally active in public affairs. She took a leading part in the church, was Worthy Matron of O.E.S. Chapter, was a member of the Crescent Club (a study club), and for many years was Secretary of the Park Cemetery Association. She was one of the first promoters of a public library for the town.

Amy Helen was gifted with a lyric soprano voice, which, without training, had a longer range than the leading opera singer of the day. However, she had no opportunity to study music, or to realize her dream of thrilling audiences with her voice. She was quick, vivacious, companionable, and very popular with persons of all classes and ages. She was an excellent marksman and a good horsewoman, which abilities gave her much recreation on the prairie.

The Corlett Family in America

By the time her children were all away at work or at college, and her husband had retired from the grain business, Amy's health broke. During the last two and a half years of her life she tried to satisfy a life-long urge for travel and adventure inherited from her father. In 1914 the family brought her to Ontario, California, to be with her son, Carroll, who had settled here. Here she enjoyed life as fully as constant pain would permit. Her last efforts were expended in planning a new house, into which the family moved two months before her death, March 12, 1916. She had given of her strength so generously to those she loved, that she had none left for herself. Greater love hath no man than this.

- V C 371 ELSIE CATHERINE HAMILTON, daughter of Henry C. and Amy Helen.

1907, graduated from the Nora Springs Seminary.

When her mother became ill, she gave up her profession to care for her and the household. After her mother's death she continued to make a home for her father and brothers until all had married and gone. In the meanwhile, in 1919, she resumed teaching. For over thirty years she was a member of the faculty of Chaffey Union High School, Ontario, California.

Elsie Catherine enjoyed tramping and camping in the mountains, and traveling, especially throughout the United States, Canada, Mexico, and the countries of the Pacific basin. She was executive secretary of Ontario Chapter, the American Red Cross for twelve years, and a member of the Board of Directors for seventeen more.

When her father became ill, she undertook the management of his business which included city property and fruit land. It was a liberal education in business and agriculture.

For a short time, in Idaho, he was in the employ of the Union Pacific Railroad, but eventually located in Ontario, California, where he cultivated eighty acres of peaches and raisin grapes for his father.

In 1915 when his father bought the agency for the Ford Motor Cars in Ontario, Carroll became associated with him and handled the Fordson Tractor. He also invented a cultivator especially adapted to California orchards of the time, and for several years manufactured and sold it.

In the spring of 1921 he and his father sold their automobile business, and Carroll bought one hundred and twenty acres of raw land near Alta Loma, California. The rest of his life was spent developing it into productive fruit land and in rearing a family.

Just as the land was coming into the best production and his boys were entering adolescence, Carroll was fatally injured in an automobile accident one morning while going from his ranch to his father's vineyard. After eight days suffering he passed away October 5, 1939.

Carroll Corlett was gifted with a beautiful baritone voice, an appreciation of, and a talent for artistic and literary expression, a pleasant wit, and an inventive genius. Shortly before his death he had devised a method of orchard heating which would cost very little and which would be devoid of all smoke and unpleasant fumes. Had he lived through the harvest, he would have had it perfected and patented.

In college Carroll was a member of Institute, of the Grinnell College Glee Club, and of the Band in which he played the clarinet. In later years he also played the saxophone, and spent leisure time singing, drawing, writing verse, hunting and fishing. He was a member of the Baptist Church, the Red Hill Country Club, B.P.O.E., and shared in several local enterprises for civic betterment.

The Crawford Family

The Crawford clan was of Celtic origin. Although it repulsed the Romans at the Clyde near Crawford Castle, it later was less successful against the invasions of Picts and Norsemen. Therefore the people became a blend of the three nationalities.

The name, originally spelled Crod-Phort and pronounced Croforst, meant a sheltered place. It should not be confused with Crow-Ford, a passage across the Clyde within the Crawford land boundaries, which took its name from the fact that crows flew over the river at this point to find protection at the end of the day.

A descendant of the Earl of Richmond¹ became the Earl of Crawford. Under his banner, which displayed saltire spears supporting a stag's head, many a brave clansman fought for the freedom of his country.

The son of Andrew Crawford was Thomas born in 1690. He was a stout jolly Scot who loved the sea, owned his own ship, and was the Captain thereof. It was he who eventually migrated to America during the second decade of the eighteenth century, married, and established a home in New Jersey. He became the father of ten children, four boys and six girls. However, misfortune befell him. Caught in a storm at sea, he went down with his ship carrying all his earthly goods with him. His wife, thus impoverished, was unable to provide properly for the children. She bound them out. They became scattered, their records were lost except that of William, the seventh child.

II WILLIAM CRAWFORD, son of Thomas.

Born March 2, 1731, Jersey City, N. J.

Married May 28, 1764, (3) Catherine Rolfsmith; born May 28, 1747; died May 28, 1847.

Children:

1. William
2. Lizzie
3. Polly
4. John and
5. Amy, twins
6. Rebecca
7. Moses.

Little is known of William's activities except that he was married three times. In 1774-5 he moved to Minisink, "the land from which the water is gone". It comprised portions of what is now the three states of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. Mr. James Snell² tells us:

"The most valuable portion of the famous Minisink Patent lay within the boundaries of Montague. It embraced that fertile tract of land extending from the mouth of the Machachemach at Carpenter's Point, down the left bank of the Delaware River to the lower point of 'Great Minisink Island'. This patent covered the two largest and most fertile islands of the Delaware River, with the adjoining plots lying along the Jersey shore—Machipacong Island, lying between Carpenter's Point and the Brick House, and Minisink Island lying below Brick House."

The first settlement, Minisink, was opposite the lower end of the island. At the point where a tributary joined the Delaware, the early Dutch founded Milford; and on the opposite bank Brick House, Minisink Precinct, County of Orange, Province of New York. Later it was Montague, Sussex Co., N. J. The village Brick House was so called, because a hotel built of bricks had been erected there where the old stage route from Norwalk crossed the River. It consisted of the hotel, post-office, a store, two blacksmiths' shops, a wheelwright's shop, two churches, a schoolhouse, a sawmill and some grist mills. At the point where the stream joined the Bene Kill, Johnnes Westbrook built a grist mill, while his son-in-law, Daniel Westfall had one on the opposite side. William Crawford erected his mill a mile and a half upstream from Brick House. He also ran a ferry across the river. Thomas Quick's house stood on the banks of Vander Mauk Creek, but the tavern, house, and mill were near the mouth of Quicktown Creek nearer the bend of the Delaware. All of these places and the families associated with them are important in Crawford history.

(1) January 8, 1776, William Crawford was commissioned Lieutenant in Captain John Beatty's Company in the Fifth Pennsylvanian Battalion. He was taken prisoner at Fort Washington November 16, 1776 and exchanged October 25, 1780. He was entitled to the Captain's commission from January 1778. He did not reenter the army. Probably he returned to his flour mill and ferry.

CATHERINE AMANDA CRAWFORD

The Corlett Family in America

Married May 31, 1851, John Edward Corlett².
To them were born twelve children³.

Catherine Amanda was educated in the public schools of her native state and at Mount Retirement Seminary, Libertyville, N. J. After her graduation she taught school until her marriage to John E. Corlett. For five years the young couple resided in Sullivan County, New York, where their two oldest children were born. In January 1856 they came as pioneers to Farmersburg Township, Clayton County, Iowa. In May her third child was born. Her whole life was devoted to helping her husband in his many undertakings, maintaining a real home for him, their twelve children, and the many guests who came to their door. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church in Pennsylvania and of the Methodist Church in Iowa. Needless to say her life was one of ceaseless work and thoughtfulness for others. To attend to the physical, educational, and spiritual needs of her large family was indeed time-consuming. In 1898 she moved with her husband to Elkader. They had buried three sons, the remaining nine children were married happily except the youngest son was still in college. A life's work had been completed. There remained eight years to enjoy in ease and comfort. In May 1906 she suffered an attack of appoplexy from which she never recovered.
